In the 1500s, tailors in Genoa, Italy, made really strong pants for sailors to wear. They used a special cloth, so the sailors could wear the pants in bad weather. They were the first jeans. Around the same time, tailors in France made jeans with denim. The cloth was as strong as the one from Genoa.

In the 1850s, Levi Strauss brought denim to the USA. Around 20 years later, Jacob Davis, a tailor, bought denim from Strauss and used it to make pants. Many workers bought them because they were stronger than any cloth out there.

Jeans were expensive in the 1980s. Fashion designers like Gloria Vanderbilt made special jeans with their names on them. Many people wore them because they wanted to be fashionable. Now, people, both young and old, love to have a pair of fashionable jeans. They wear them to be in fashion.
